Testimony	Although I grew up in East Africa as the daughter of WGM missionaries, I never imagined that I would one day be called to be a missionary myself. When I first received my call while I was a college senior, I knew that God had begun a new thing and that I wouldn't be going back to Africa as a missionary. But I still wasn't sure where I would end up. It wasn't until I was a seminary student that God began to put the Japanese people on my heart. Several of the other students taking classes, including two of the other women in the dormitory, were Japanese. It was through hearing the burden these two shared for their own people that God began to tug at my heart as well. For the past two years, I have served as a missionary disciple in Japan, teaching English; working with children, youth, and college-age students; and learning Japanese. Now an officially appointed career missionary with WGM, I look forward to returning to Japan and sharing the life-giving message of the gospel with the Japanese young people.
